It is necessary to develop a strategy which allows for social distancing by defining the maximum number of resources at a given time in a specific building.

These challenges and more, created by the pandemic, are compounded by the potential contamination of validation resources with the coronavirus. All these challenges have had negative impacts on delivery of critical validation activities needed in support of manufacturing operations and the implementation of new equipment. Unfortunately, although most companies in the industry have Business Continuity Plans most of them were not detailed or inclusive enough to provide contingencies to all impacted functional areas. This article will highlight strategies that enable validation leadership and teams...
